How Our New Instagram Feed Engages the 35+ Audience for Donations

Our new Instagram feed is strategically designed to resonate with adults aged 35 and up, a demographic that values authentic storytelling, social impact, and credibility. By combining vibrant visuals with research-backed captions centered on local change makers, we build an emotional connection while reinforcing trust—two key drivers of engagement and donations among this group.

1. Emotional Connection Through Real Stories

Each post highlights individuals who are making change happen in their communities—farmers, conservationists, educators, and local leaders. According to Stanford Social Innovation Review, storytelling increases the likelihood of donations by 80% when it features relatable individuals rather than abstract issues.

-Example: “Meet Esther, a local farmer who’s transforming her village with sustainable agriculture...”

This storytelling approach taps into the 35+ audience’s desire for meaningful engagement and real-world impact, encouraging them to share, comment, and donate.

2. Trust Through Research & Data

Our captions don’t just tell a story—they connect it to reliable, research-based findings. For example, citing studies from the UN FAO, African Wildlife Economy Report, or community development data demonstrates that our work is grounded in evidence, not just emotion.

-Caption example: “Studies show that empowering rural women increases farm yields by up to 30%.”

This builds credibility, which is essential for an older audience who may be more skeptical or selective about where they give. A report by the Charitable Giving Institute found that donors over 35 are 2x more likely to support causes that show measurable results.

3. Relatability and Representation

The visuals highlight people who reflect the audience’s values—hard work, community, leadership, and family—making it easier for followers to see themselves in the story. Featuring older change makers or intergenerational groups reinforces that change is a shared effort, not just youth-led.

4. Clear, Respectful Calls to Action

For this audience, tone matters. Instead of flashy gimmicks, we use clear, respectful CTAs like “Tap the link in bio to support Esther’s mission” or “Join us in building lasting impact.” This aligns with research by NextAfter Institute, which shows that midlife and older donors respond better to clear, cause-driven asks over vague or overly casual messages.

Why It Works

This approach is effective because it:

- Appeals to both emotion and reason
- Highlights personal stories that humanize global issues
- Provides evidence for the impact of giving
- Creates a sense of shared purpose and empowerment

In short, our feed is not just a gallery—it's a call to action powered by people and proven by data.

At Innovet, we don't wait for change—we create it! As students, we are the "it" learners, we are stakeholders in building sustainable, innovative solutions for Uganda and beyond. And as the saying goes, if you want to go far, go together!

That's why we're beyond thrilled to join forces with Roots Africa Inc in advancing EDO No. 2: Zero Hunger!

Drumroll, please...

After an intense, highly competitive selection process led by Kierlin Masarurh, Bazira Zaidi, Martin B. Payindoo and Maria Mafai, we are ecstatic to announce that TWO of our Innovet pods have been selected for the prestigious Roots Africa Changemakers Program V! These teams stood out for their bold vision, impact-driven approach, and commitment to transforming agriculture.

A Poultry Pod - A force to be reckoned with! Since last year, this pod has been empowering pig farmers in Kibazi, Kampala through expert-led training in feeding, management, and high-quality piglet production, boosting both productivity and farmer incomes.

A Poultry Pod - Our recent game-changer! This pod is set to redefine poultry farming by equipping farmers with innovative feeding and nutrition strategies to maximize yields and profitability.

This is more than just a milestone—it's a movement!

A huge THANK YOU to Roots Africa Inc for believing in our vision. We are ready to make an even greater impact.

Because at Innovet, we don't wait for change—we create it!

Africa doesn't need charity. It needs leadership.

Content Reach and Views - Top Performing Content:

1. “Uganda is Beautiful” reel – 1,375 views
2. Campus Tour with Kerrin, Dave, and Elly – 666 views
3. Changemaker introduction – 544 views
4. Nature visuals (wildlife) – 528 views
5. Event-related graphics (Bootcamp, Farmers, University visits) – 200–260 views

Interpretation:

- Visually compelling reels, particularly those showing natural landscapes, local culture, and dynamic human interaction, significantly outperform static content.
- Posts that feature real people and behind-the-scenes activity (e.g., tours, trainings, campus events) receive higher traction, reaffirming the importance of human-centered storytelling.

Mid-Level Engagement Content (20–100 views)

- General flyers, program agendas, and announcements typically received between 20–36 views.
- While informative, these posts had lower performance due to being text-heavy or lacking emotional or visual storytelling elements.

Interpretation:

- Informational content is essential but should be paired with high-impact visuals or captions that emphasize community involvement or changemaker narratives.
- Static promotional graphics alone are less effective unless supported by context or real-life visuals.

Low Performing Content (Under 20 views / 1 account engaged)

- Many formal posts such as Substack links, orientation flyers, and graphics-heavy updates show very low engagement (1–10 views or interactions).
- Several posts only received 1 account engagement, indicating a need for improved targeting or more interactive formats.

Interpretation:

- Low interaction with formal text posts suggests the current audience prefers storytelling and people-focused visuals over institutional materials.
- Future posts of this kind should be reformatted with a narrative hook, testimonials, or quotes to humanize the content.

Audience Engagement Patterns

- Highest Engagement Sources: Reels and photo-based posts with community members, nature scenes, and direct captions.

Lowest Engagement Sources

- Graphics without people, Zoom screenshots, or flyer announcements without strong narrative elements.

Following a review of our content engagement metrics across Roots Africa's social platforms from October 2024 to April 2025, we conducted an analysis to identify which types of posts are resonating most effectively with our audience.

Our findings strongly support the hypothesis that content emphasizing changemakers, community involvement, and mission-driven work consistently achieves the highest levels of engagement.

Key Insights:

- Leadership/Changemaker-focused content yielded the highest average click-through rate (CTR) of 50%, with strong performance in both impressions and user interactions.
- Posts highlighting our Changemaker Program and individual changemakers also performed very well, with average CTRs of 37.5% and 36.26%, respectively.
- Mission- and community-grounded posts, particularly those showcasing fieldwork and relationship-building, maintained a solid average CTR of 32.55%.
- In contrast, generalized announcements or broad calls to action showed significantly lower engagement, averaging below 7% CTR.

Recommendation:

To maximize visibility and connection with our audience, we recommend prioritizing content that:

- Tells authentic stories of our changemakers on the ground
- Emphasizes our hands-on mission and community engagement
- Showcases leadership and collaboration among students, farmers, and institutions
