

Roots Africa: Informational Storytelling and Social Media Strategy

Team: Amanda Tuman, Christina Cosentino, Sumiyah Yusuf, Anya Dhuria

Client Background Research

Task: To enhance its storytelling and digital presence to effectively communicate its mission, impact, and community transformation efforts by crafting a compelling narrative, developing a structured content strategy, and leveraging social media to amplify Roots Africa's reach and influence.

What do they do?

- Roots Africa mission is to combat hunger and poverty through partnering with academic institutions by connecting African farming communities to agricultural experts.
- Through these partnerships they promote engagement in agriculture, entrepreneurship, and volunteering through their program.
- They believe Africa does not need charity, rather change-makers.

Who are their stakeholders?

- Local Farmers
- Rural Communities
- Government Officials
- Local NGO's (non-profit organizations)
- Educational Institutions in Africa
- Partnered with: College of Agriculture & Natural Resources, Do Good, Leadership Idaho Agriculture, Vitta Solutions

What is their mission or business strategy?

- ROOTS Africa's mission is to combat hunger and poverty by connecting African farming communities with agricultural experts.
- Their strategy focuses on partnerships with academic institutions to engage students in agriculture, entrepreneurship, and volunteering.
- They emphasize knowledge transfer and skill-building rather than direct aid, believing that Africa needs change-makers rather than charity.

How does their problem or need fit into what they do?

- The core problem ROOTS Africa addresses is the lack of agricultural knowledge, technology, and market access for farmers in rural Africa.
- Their approach directly tackles this by: provide education/training to young people/farmers, connect students with agricultural experts, establish student clubs/chapters, and offer practical workshops.

How do similar organizations function in this market?

- Some focus on direct aid, providing farmers with seeds, tools, or financial help. Others, like Kiva, use microfinance, offering small loans to help farmers grow their businesses.
- One Acre Fund, emphasizes training and technology, giving farmers hands-on education and better tools.

Roots Africa: Informational Storytelling and Social Media Strategy

Team: Amanda Tuman, Christina Cosentino, Sumiyah Yusuf, Anya Dhuria

- ROOTS Africa takes a different approach by partnering with universities and engaging students
- Similar organizations: The Hunger Project, AGRA, One Acre Fund